

Jane Shaw Dewey

As a child, I always dabbled in visual art. I loved art museums and art shows. Attending festivals with lots of creative art became my weekend habit. As a pediatric occupational therapist, I often used art as part of individualized therapy for my clients. In retirement, I reconnected to my vision of creating art and started painting with oils. I have had the wonderful opportunity of taking classes and learning from many great mentors across the country. It is the joy of mixing color combined with a spiritual connection with the subject that keeps me inspired as an artist.

In my retirement I have had the opportunity to pursue my passion for art and oil painting. I have studied and continue to mentor with several accomplished oil painters and teachers. My art work has been selected for several local juried and curated art shows.
